The Court prefers video appearances, if possible, as it ensures it is easier to know who is appearing at the hearing and being able to see the other parties reduces interruptions and delays. Additionally, appearing by video increases the chance that the Court can use features such as shared screens to show everyone exhibits or forms that may be helpful for the hearing. However, no party shall be penalized for appearing by phone. Whether parties appear by videoconference, phone, or a hybrid of the two, they should try as much as possible to contact the court from an area with no background noise as noise and echoes prevent the parties from hearing the proceedings in the courtroom and prevent the court from making a good record of the proceedings. The parties are especially discouraged from appearing virtually from an outdoor location.
